The time spent hunting down changes and implementing changes has been eliminated. Now everyone can see an up-to-the-minute list of who they can call on, so they're reaching out more."

Dr. Steven Cabrales, VP of Medical Affairs, Community Hospital of Monterey

Outdated scheduling processes and poor communication create workflow inefficiencies that negatively impact patient outcomes. Providers and staff need to quickly find the right person to communicate with but spreadsheets, whiteboards, and pagers can simply no longer keep up with the demands of today's healthcare systems. As a result, patient throughput and delivery of care suffers as disrupted workflows hinder staff from providing the best care possible.
